PELCRA

PELCRA (Polish and English Language Corpora for Research and Applications), originally started in 1997, is a research group at the Institute of English Studies, University of Łódź, Poland. The group's main research interests and activities include corpus and computational linguistics, natural language processing, information retrieval and information extraction. Since 1997 the corpus resources and tools for both English and Polish corpus data have found applications in academic and technological research as well as in the area of language teaching, translation, lexicography and language processing.
